

Cal OES Daily Situation Report

February 7, 2018

Today marks the 1 year anniversary that the damage to the Oroville Dam's main spillway appeared, resulting in its closure. As precipitation continued, the lake level rose until it flowed over the emergency spillway, despite the reopening of the damaged main spillway. As water flowed over the emergency spillway, erosion threatened to undermine and collapse the concrete weir. A collapse never occurred, but the main spillway suffered significant damage and the bare slope of the emergency spillway was significantly eroded. Photo Credit: California DWR

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

 Dry with Periods of Gusty N-NE Winds, Strongest Monday/Tuesday ***

Strong high pressure just west of CA will be stationary through Friday. This pattern will produce mostly clear skies and well above normal temperatures under a dry NW-N flow aloft. Afternoon temperatures will be as much as 15-20 degrees above normal with minimum RH in inland areas reaching 15-25%. N-NE surface winds will gust to around 25 mph during nights and mornings from the western Cascade-Sierra slopes to the coastal mountains each day through Friday.

A fairly strong but dry cold front will move from north to south across the region Friday night. At this point no precipitation is expected with the front. Temperatures will be cooler, but still several degrees above normal, and minimum daily RH will be higher. N-NE/offshore winds following the front could gust to 40-50 mph and locally higher in the usual areas from the western Cascade-Sierra slopes to the coast Saturday through early Sunday. A similar cold front will pass over the region Sunday night, and somewhat stronger winds are expected Monday and Tuesday. This front is expected to produce isolated light rain and snow showers in far northern areas.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

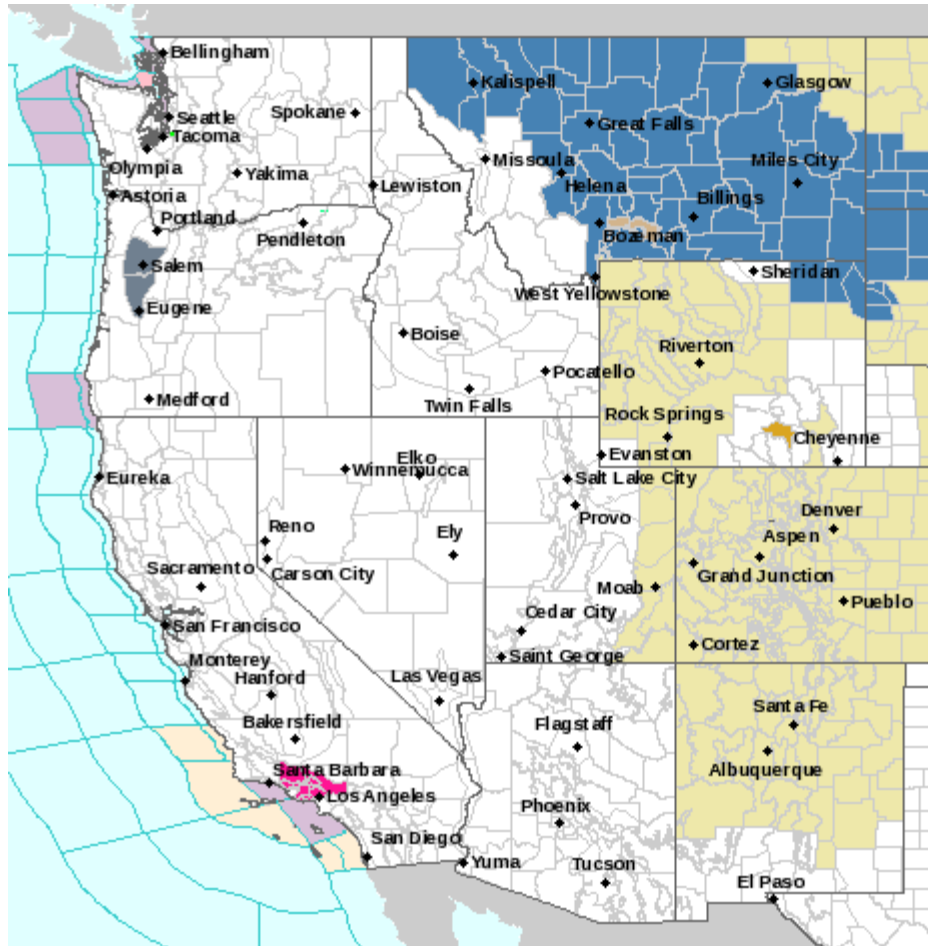

Very warm and dry through Thursday

Strong high pressure off the California Coast will bring very warm and dry conditions to the region through Thursday. Maximum temperatures will be 10 to 20 degrees above normal, with 60s to low 70s across the mountains and mid 70s to mid 80s in the valleys. Minimum humidity will be in the single digits and teens away from the San Joaquin Valley. Local northeast to east winds of 10 to 20 mph with gusts to 35 mph will surface across the mountains and below the canyons and passes of Southern California through Thursday morning. Temperatures will cool a few degrees especially near the coast and minimum humidity will increase mainly into the teens Friday as the strong high pressure area moves further off the coast. A couple of troughs will move inland over the Pacific Northwest and then into Nevada which will bring more substantial cooling to the region Saturday through early next week. Temperatures will be near normal by early next week. There will be westerly winds of 15 to 25 mph with gusts to 40 mph across the wind prone mountain and desert areas Friday evening through Saturday afternoon and Monday ahead of each trough. There will be northeast winds of 15 to 25 with gusts to 40 mph across the mountains and below the canyons and passes of Southern California Saturday evening through Sunday morning and Tuesday behind each trough.
